

6 QUESTIONS ABOUT THE DEATH PENALTY

1 DOES THE DEATH PENALTY DETER CRIME? NO EVIDENCE.

Of the more than 100 studies conducted over the past 50 years on the deterrent effect of the death penalty, none have reported with any credibility that it deters violent crime.

3 DOES OUR CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM CONVICT INNOCENT PEOPLE? YES. MISTAKES HAPPEN.

On average, it takes more than 10 years for evidence proving innocence to emerge. DNA has contributed to hundreds of exonerations of wrongfully convicted people. Mistakes were due to:

69% EYE WITNESS MISIDENTIFICATION

29% FALSE CONFESSIONS

43% UNVALIDATED/IMPROPER FORENSICS

17% INFORMANTS/"SNITCHES"

—Data from The Innocence Project. Total is more than 100% because wrongful convictions may have more than one contributing factor.

- economic factors; whether defendants can afford their own attorneys
- experience level of defense counsel
- race of victim

DOES THE DEATH PENALTY PROVIDE CLOSURE TO VICTIMS' FAMILIES? LISTEN TO THE FAMILIES.

“In 1986 my mother was raped and murdered in her rural home [...] you can never have closure because that person will never come back to you. [...] The death penalty holds out a false promise to people of a release from their pain and suffering that only time and grieving can bring.”

—Celeste Dixon, Larned, KS

“What I’ve discovered is a legal process that no murder victim’s family should have to endure.”

—Neely Goen, daughter of Kansas State Trooper Conroy O’Brien killed in 1978

IS THE DEATH PENALTY HUMANE? NO.

Despite efforts to medicalize the death penalty with lethal injection, 2014 was a year rife with botched executions. Inmates reportedly gasped, choked and struggled before succumbing, long after the lethal dose was intended to take full effect. The secrecy of drug combinations and their sources and the ability for prison staff to competently administer the lethal dose are all fraught with doubt and difficulty.
